Fellon joins NW Natural after spending the last eight years as an executive at Puget Sound Energy in Bellevue, Wash., where he served as director of applications services, AI and data. Prior to that, Fellon held key IT positions at Eddie Bauer (NASDAQ: EBHI), Recreational Equipment, Inc. and Boeing (NYSE: BA). Fellon received degrees from the University of Washington and Seattle University.

"Brian brings a great deal of knowledge and experience, including serving in a leadership role the last several years at a large utility," said David H. Anderson, CEO of NW Natural Holdings. "He has a terrific understanding of the important fundamentals of IT that keep us running smoothly and safely every day, along with a proven track record of leading and executing on organization-wide IT strategies."

"I am thrilled to join the NW Natural team and to help further the role of technology in our business for both customers and employees," said Fellon. "Technology is pivotal in supporting our operations and is essential to the customer experience. I look forward to working with the talented NW Natural team as we continue to create value together."
