Pinterest's mission is to bring everyone the inspiration to create a life they love. In furtherance of our mission, Pinterest¹ is committed to operating ethically and responsibly, treating everyone with dignity, and respecting the rights of all individuals. Pinterest does not tolerate any forms of slavery or human trafficking in our business or on our platform and is committed to respecting human rights, including the principles recognized in international human rights standards like the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

In accordance with the UK Modern Slavery Act 2015, this statement, which covers our 2022 fiscal year, describes our policies and practices with respect to combating slavery and human trafficking on our platform and in our business operations and supply chains.

Pinterest's business and structure

Pinterest is a visual discovery engine enabling millions of people around the world to find inspiration for their lives and turn that inspiration into reality. We generate revenue by serving ads on our website and mobile application to users around the world, including in the UK. Advertisers purchase ads directly from us or through their relationships with advertising agencies.

Pinterest, Inc. is incorporated in Delaware, and our worldwide headquarters is located in San Francisco, California. We currently have offices in Europe, Australia, Asia, South America, and North America.

Our platform content policies

Pinterest's Community guidelines are designed to support our mission of inspiration. They govern what we do and don't allow on Pinterest, and all users must abide by them. Pinterest strictly prohibits any content on our platform that exploits people, including content that involves human trafficking; sex trafficking; any form of slavery, servitude, and forced or compulsory labor; and other illegal commercial exploitation.

When we become aware of a violation of our Community guidelines, we'll take action to deactivate or limit the distribution of violating content, including Pins, boards, comments and user profiles. We also take efforts to block users from saving content from domains that violate our content policies and block search terms and serve advisories for some types of exploitation policy violations. More information about our Community guidelines, including those related to content safety, can be found at <https://policy.pinterest.com>.

In addition to our Community guidelines, we have Advertising guidelines that govern advertising content. For example, Pinterest prohibits advertisements for illegal products and services, illegal drugs, tobacco, and adult content, including ads for services that provide casual sex, international matchmaking or escorts, and the objectification of a person in a sexual manner to sell a product or service, all of which carry the risk of human trafficking. Our advertising guidelines are publicly available at <https://policy.pinterest.com>.

Additionally, our Merchant guidelines require that merchants on Pinterest abide by the list of prohibited products and services in our Advertising guidelines. We also require merchants to follow all relevant laws, regulations, and industry codes when using Pinterest's service.

Our corporate policies

Pinterest's global Code of Business Conduct & Ethics (the "Code") applies to all Pinterest employees, officers, board members, contingent workers, consultants, and anyone who works on behalf of Pinterest around the world. It describes Pinterest's commitment to creating a positive, welcoming, and inspiring place on the internet, and Pinterest's expectations with respect to compliance with applicable law, anti-bribery, data privacy and workplace privacy, harassment and discrimination, workplace safety, and more. The Code also encourages employees to report any concerns they might have, including those related to unethical or illegal behavior. Pinterest employees are trained regularly on the Code. Pinterest's Code is available on our corporate website at <https://investor.pinterestinc.com/governance>.

Pinterest has other formal corporate policies reflecting our commitment to prevent violations of human rights in our business, including our Respect in the Workplace Policy, Global Purchasing Policy, and Sanctions & Export Control Policy.

Partnerships with experts

Pinterest has partnered with several international non-profit organizations that are dedicated to fighting human trafficking and the sexual exploitation of children, including the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC), the Tech Coalition, and WeProtect Global Alliance. We also sponsored the Dallas Crimes Against Children Conference, which is the top anti-child exploitation conference in the world.

Our supply chains

Pinterest isn't a manufacturer and we don't purchase raw materials or commodities for our business operations. The types of goods we typically purchase are mainly office-related expenditures. The type of services we obtain relate to running a technology company, such as software licenses, payment processing, professional services, content review, and cloud computing services. Some of our suppliers are global, servicing the entire company, others are local or regional, fulfilling specific needs for our offices around the world.

Pinterest is committed to ensuring modern forms of slavery and human trafficking are not present in our business operations and we expect anyone providing goods or services to Pinterest, including our suppliers, contractors, and their agents, to respect human rights, hold themselves to high ethical standards, and abide by the law in their own business practices and supply chains. Pinterest's agreements with our suppliers require compliance with all applicable laws in the performance of the agreement. Pinterest also performs due diligence on certain third parties that is tailored to risk factors, including the location of the supplier and the type of services that will be provided to Pinterest.

Pinterest's Supplier Code of Conduct sets out our expectations for our suppliers' business conduct when working with Pinterest. The Supplier Code of Conduct states Pinterest's commitment to respecting human rights, including the principles recognized in international human rights standards like the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and preventing modern forms of slavery and human trafficking in our supply chains or business. Suppliers are responsible for communicating and training their staff, subcontractors, and other representatives about Pinterest's expectations and principles. Failing to meet our expectations may affect a supplier's current or future business with Pinterest. The Supplier Code of Conduct makes clear that any suspected unethical behavior, violations of company policy, or illegal conduct, should be reported to Pinterest as soon as possible. The Supplier Code of Conduct is available on Pinterest's corporate website <https://investor.pinterestinc.com/governance>.

Reporting

Pinterest is committed to transparency in our approach to respecting human rights. Pinterest reports publicly on our progress, including through this annual Modern Slavery Act Transparency Statement, which is available on our corporate website (<https://investor.pinterestinc.com/governance>), and our Global Transparency Report (<https://policy.pinterest.com/en/transparency-report>).

Pinterest also maintains an anonymous reporting hotline and web portal for employees, contractors, clients, suppliers, and the public to report conduct that might violate Pinterest's policies or the law, including concerns about human rights, slavery or human trafficking in Pinterest's supply chains or business operations. These reporting channels are listed in the Code of Business Conduct & Ethics and our Supplier Code of Conduct.
